

media for the people

I am very upset that the FCC, a government organization that is supposed to serve the people of this country, is about to pass (or may have already passed) entirely self-serving legislation that can only damage that state of the media in this country. With the concentration of media ownership, the chance for smaller voices, and diverse voices to be heard becomes even less likely. Those in power over media giants would have all the more chances to push their agendas. This reminds me of nothing less than, let's see, Nazi Germany? Mussolini's Italy? Stalin's USSR? The chance for corruption of any system increases proportionally in relation to the concentration of power within it. Please reconsider this action that ultimately opposes democracy.
